

Commemorative Holidays

For thousands of years, human society has set up days of remembrance to mark special events which have taken place. Modern examples of this in the USA are times such as Veterans Day, Memorial day and Presidents Day. None of these days are meant as religious festivals or in any way intended to honor some form of god being, real or otherwise.

The old testament has accounts of such times, and God does not show a disapproval. At this writing, the one in particular that comes to mind is the celebration and commemoration of the events in the book of Ruth. When those who wanted to destroy the Jews were defeated, the people established a day of remembrance to never forget what had happened and how the end turned out – giving God the praise and glory for their survival.

This document, therefore is going to be short. Honor our past presidents, remember and respect our soldiers and feel good that God has allowed you to live in a nation where your labors can be properly rewarded.

God bless you all.
